

Originally from Spa, Bernard (46 y) is now living in the very centre of Brussels, where you will often come across him in our favourite bars – or walking his dog.

As a chemical engineer, he worked more than 20 years in the cement and concrete industry (based in B, NL, D and CH) before creating in 2018 his own consultancy company specialized in environment and climate protection for industrial sectors.

He is investing a lot of time as a volunteer in his role of president of “Engineers Without Borders Belgium” – an association supporting development and health projects in Africa as well as social projects in Belgium.

Bernard is multilingual, social and passionate about human beings. But he certainly doesn't shy away from pups, pigs, teddy bears and cuddly cubs.

He values immensely the freedom we enjoy as a leather community Belgium. At his level, he wants to help make our community even more visible all over the country, vibrant, inter-connected and supportive.

At the age of PReP, the hypocrisy, intolerance and discriminations against HIV positive persons is a real concern he very well knows about. He believes that the leather family must remain mobilized, ‘kicking the ass’ of all haters or ignorants.

Bernard is happily partnered. He loves good wines, good beers, good shrimp croquettes, good boys and all good ways of being (very) bad.
